

Large windows, a vaulted ceiling, and a light and airy palette serve a refreshing dose of sunlight in a kitchen that was dark and dated.

sunny delight

1. Open up Sunlight fills this freshly remodeled kitchen, a natural wake-up call for Jeff and Regina McNamara. "We wanted to bring as much light in as we could," Regina says.

2. Choose timeless elements

The McNamara's wanted to honor the age and style of the house when they remodeled the kitchen. The classic lines of the shaker-style cabinetry will always be appropriate in the house. A faded white finish on the cabinets and marble countertops keep everything in the space light because it tends to be dark. The wide-plank oak floor mimics the floors in the rest of the house. A custom stain give them a time-worn look.

3. Include modern appeal

Jeff and Regina both enjoy cooking and the counterspace and light they gained in the kitchen accomodates both of their culinary needs. The suite of stainless-steel appliances from Thermador is a perfect fit in the classic space. A gray tint in the grout between the subway tiles complements the silvery accents found throughout the kitchen.
